A RESOLVE GUIDE FOR BUYERS

Homes priced to sell.
How buyers find the good ones.

Some of the best value on MLS sits in plain sight: power of sale homes, homes where the price has already come down, and homes that have been listed for two months or more. Most buyers scroll past them. This guide shows you what each one is, how to spot a good one, and how to make an offer the seller says yes to.

Across the GTA, Durham, Brampton, Hamilton and Kitchener-Waterloo, new ones list every week. The good ones go quickly, usually to the buyer who saw it first and was ready.

> "I track these homes every week, read each one before a buyer spends a Saturday on it, and negotiate the offer. You pick the home. I do the searching."

1 · THREE KINDS OF SELLER READY TO MOVE

Real homes, with sellers ready to talk.

All three are listed on MLS like any other home. What sets them apart is the seller.

SOLD BY THE LENDER

Power of sale

What it is	A home sold by the lender after the owner has fallen behind on the mortgage.
What it tells you	The seller wants to be repaid, not to hold out for top dollar. No emotional pricing and no attachment to the house.
Where the value is	Often priced to draw offers, often vacant, and usually flexible on the closing date.

THE MARKET HAS SPOKEN

Price drops

What it is	A home listed lower than its first asking price, sometimes more than once.
What it tells you	The seller has seen what buyers will pay and has moved toward it.
Where the value is	Many buyers set alerts on new listings only, so a home that has dropped can get less attention than it deserves.

STILL WAITING FOR THE RIGHT BUYER

60 days or more on the market

What it is	A home that has been listed for two months or more, including homes taken off and listed again.
What it tells you	A seller who has waited a while is usually open to a sensible offer.
Where the value is	Often the home itself is fine. It was priced high at the start, or marketed badly. Those are the easiest problems for a buyer to solve.

Worth knowing: a power of sale home is sold as is, the lender adds its own schedule to the offer, and it can take a few days to answer. All standard, and I walk you through each part.

2 · WHERE THEY ARE

They are on MLS. Most buyers just don't see them.

None of the three comes with a label. The signs are spread across the listing.

- Power of sale shows up in the remarks and the schedules, not in a search filter.
- A price drop shows in the listing history, which most buyers never open.
- Days on market resets when a home is taken off and listed again, so the real number can be much longer than the one on the screen.

What I do every week

I search all five areas for all three groups, read the full history of each home, and send you the ones that fit your areas, budget and timing, with my notes on each. You see them early, with the homework already done.

Area snapshot · as of 29 October 2026

AREA	POWER OF SALE	PRICE DROPS	60+ DAYS	MOST PRICED
Toronto	61	1,724	2,864	$399K to $3.8M
Durham	28	469	777	$380K to $2.6M
Brampton/Peel	45	773	1,490	$425K to $3.1M
Hamilton	9	590	810	$320K to $2.65M
Kitchener-Waterloo	3	222	364	$289K to $1.8M

Residential homes for sale on MLS® on the date shown, from my search: remarks mention power of sale; priced below the first asking price; on the market 60 days or more. A home can appear in more than one column. “Most priced” is the middle 90% of asking prices. My own listings are not counted. Listings change daily; the live snapshot is at resolverealestate.ca/power-of-sale-homes.

3 · VALUE OR JUST CHEAP

Five checks that separate value from cheap.

A low price is only good news if the home is worth more than it. These are the checks I run on every home before you see it.

1 Price against the right sales

Compare it with sold homes of the same size on the same street or in the same complex, not the area average. That is where the real value shows.

2 Condition

Some of these sell as is. The price has to leave room for whatever the home needs, and I flag what to look at during the visit.

3 Vacant or lived in

A vacant home is easier to visit and to close on. A lived-in one may need more notice, and that is worth knowing early.

4 The home's own history

Past sales, past listings, every price change and the real time on market. It tells you how the seller got to today's price, and how much further they may go.

5 What it costs to own

Property taxes, condo fees and any work it needs, added up before you offer, so the price you pay is the price you planned.

The result: you only spend time on homes that pass, and you walk in already knowing what a fair offer looks like.

4 · MAKING THE OFFER

An offer the seller says yes to.

Sellers who are ready to move want an offer they can count on. Price matters, and so does how sure the deal looks.

- A strong deposit. It shows you are serious, and it carries weight with any seller.
- Financing in place. A pre-approval before you offer lets you move the day the right home comes up.
- A realistic closing date. Flexible where you can be. Lenders and sellers who have waited value a clean, timely close.
- A price grounded in real sales. The five checks give us the number, and the number gives the offer its weight.

Where the negotiation is

A home with a price drop or a long time on market usually leaves room to negotiate. A power of sale home is often priced to draw offers already, so the strength of the offer matters as much as the number.

I work out where to start, when to hold, and how to win the home without paying more than it is worth. Then I negotiate it for you.

On a power of sale, expect the lender to take a few days to answer. That is normal, and it often means less competition, not more.

5 · HOW WORKING TOGETHER WORKS

Four steps, in this order.

01

Tell me what you're after

Areas, budget and timing. About a minute on the form, or a text.

02

A short call

What you want, where your financing stands, and what is out there right now.

03

Buyer representation agreement

It sets out what I do for you, for how long, in which areas, and how I am paid. We go through it before you sign.

04

Matching homes, as they list

Every week, the homes that fit, with my notes. Then visits, the offer, and the negotiation.

WHEN YOU BUY THROUGH ME

More than a tour of homes.

I find the homes, read each one for what the listing doesn't say, and negotiate the offer. And when you close, two things on top.

Your legal fees, up to $800

I cover your real estate lawyer's fees on closing, up to $800.

A $1,000 gift card

A thank-you when you get your keys.

For buyer clients under a buyer representation agreement with Taran Aujla who complete a purchase. Legal fees covered up to $800. Paid through HomeLife G1 Realty Inc., Brokerage, on closing.

You will have your own real estate lawyer for closing, as with any purchase.

WHO YOU WOULD BE WORKING WITH

You pick the home. I do the searching.

I work with buyers across the GTA, Durham, Brampton, Hamilton and Kitchener-Waterloo, and track the homes priced to sell in each of them every week.

Before this, I spent close to a decade in Ontario real estate law. Listings, schedules and title are documents I read every day, so I can tell you quickly what a home is and what it is not.

What that means for you

- You see them first. The right homes, early, with the homework done.
- No wasted Saturdays. Every home I send has passed the five checks.
- An offer with weight. Priced from real sales and put together to be accepted.
- One person, start to finish. You deal with me directly, and I answer my own phone.

Tell me your areas, budget and timing. Call or text me at (365) 645-7332.
